Subject: Report of the Chair

It's both a new year and a new opportunity to find solutions to our transportation problems in San Mateo County.

And, what are the most critical problems for the San Mateo County Transportation Authority? The answer to that question involves securing stable, long-term funding for Caltrain and SamTrans; addressing major traffic on corridors like United States (US) 101; improving safety for pedestrian/cyclists (especially post-pandemic); and enhancing connectivity/equity for underserved communities, all while navigating federal funding hurdles and planning for sustainable, multimodal solutions like improved shuttles and bike paths.

Here's a breakdown of key public concerns and challenges:

- Funding Stability: A huge issue in the potential loss of federal funds due to PEPRA (a Public Employee's Pension Reform Act) rules, threatening Caltrain/SamTrans services, pushing for regional funding measures.
- Congestion and Connectivity: Reducing traffic on US 101 and connecting coastal areas (Highway 1) with better transit, and bike and pedestrian options is a major focus.
- Safety: Higher post-pandemic collisions involving pedestrians and cyclists highlight the need for safer infrastructure (Active 101 Projects).
- Service Gaps: Inconsistent shuttle performance and “last mile” challenge in connecting people to regional transit remain significant hurdles, per the SamTrans shuttle study.
- Equity: Ensuring improved access for lower income and underserved communities is a priority for new programs.

In essence, the public wants reliable, safe and accessible transit, but the San Mateo County Transportation Authority faces huge financial and operational challenges to deliver it, especially concerning regional rail and first/last mile connections.
