For all the old timers: same start time, same food and drink, same rules, same everything else.

For our new friends:

Near 35 years ago, my wife Susan had a crazy idea: let's carol for christmas. Now there were a few impediments. We couldn't sing, and knew only the opening lyrics to most songs. We're heathens. And, we lived in the LA 'burbs, not someplace where folks do such things. Where the sight of A VERY LARGE MAN, a small woman, screeching something that though festive, did not seem to be music, would surely terrify folks, and have the cops escorting us home right quick. Even if they did have a babe in a red wagon and said small women was 8 months pregnant. So, we figured we should invite our friends and family to join us. Clearly if two people caroling were scary, 30 more doing the same would be spectacular and cool and okay. For a couple of geeks, perhaps not the most logical conclusion. Go figure ;-> Well, it turned out great, it's had a long run, and continues every year. We still can't sing. We still know only some of the lyrics (but we have song sheets now). And our house is small so it'll be a crush.

We'd love to have you join us!

For everyone!

Our long running Saturnalia, Winter Celebration, Caroling party will be on Saturday December 12th this year.

We'll nosh on goodies and chat. About 6:30 or 7:00 ish we'll go forth and sing to our neighbors. We sing till we are tired or cold or wet or hungry or until our neighbors have had enough of us and drive us back to the house ;-> Then we hang out until you all give up and go home.

We'll be serving home made eggnog (fully alcohol enhanced), mulled cider, arancini, a chocolate concoction of some sort, cookies, spiced nuts, pizzelle, biscotti, and goodies of all sorts.

We have lyrics, we just need your voices. Don't worry about it if you can't sing. Neither can we. It's mostly just an excuse to have fun. The only thing you need to bring is a flashlight to read the lyrics. Feel free to bring Gabriel's horn, geetars, or other instruments. Though I suggest you leave behind the tubas and pianos. Sorry to those partial to those instruments.

Mostly this feels like a Christmas event because we only know Christmas carols. If you come from a different religious tradition, please join us anyhow. Heck, if a bunch of atheistic heathens can host a Christmas caroling party, I'm sure we can embrace other faiths too. If singing carols is just too offensive for you, there's always a fair contingent that does not go out, seizing the opportunity for easy access to the goodies while the house is less jammed.

Feel free to drag along family and friends. They may never forgive you, but we'd love to have them join us!

It would be great for folks to be vaxed and boosted. And free of other known plagues. No one wants to celebrate with friends and come down with a cough or cold or flu or long covid. But we won't ask or insist.
